CONCILIATION

What is it?

Conciliation is a noncontentious procedure for the settlement of disputes in which a third impartial person helps the parties to reach an agreement and to resolve a dispute.

What are the advantages?

Informality

A request for conciliation may be sent online by using the appropriate form in the area “online conciliation” of the website www.emediation.it; The Centre, through its software, will take care of inviting the other party to participate to the conciliation Procedure.

The conciliation procedure will take place in the branch offices of the Centre located throughout the territory duly registered with the Ministry of Justice.

Confidentiality

The mediator is bound by a secrecy obligation with regard to the statements and information acquired during the mediation procedure.

The mediator cannot testify.

Rapidity

The procedure cannot last more than three months.

Efficacy

The minutes recording an agreement may become enforceable for the purposes of commencing attachment proceedings, seeking specific performance and recording a judicial mortgage, following the homologation by the President of the Court in whose district the Centre has its main office.

Cost efficiency

The tariffs vary on the basis of the value of the dispute and cover the entire conciliation procedure, be it mandatory or optional.
